COACHING FOR PERFORMANCE

Course Overview:

"Coaching improves people's thinking. They think differently and they think more effectively.

As a result of improved thinking, they improve their behaviours, and they improve their performance."

David Rock, a thought leader in the global coaching profession.

The purpose of this interactive course is to inspire and enable leaders to facilitate productive coaching conversations within the workshop environment. These conversations are designed to create meaningful change, which in turn boosts employee performance, improves retention and increases productivity and profitability.

What you will learn:

- To advance your communication skills.
- To develop your coaching skills.
- To maintain a culture of self-reflection and ongoing learning

Content covered:

- Coaching definition: what it is and what it's not.
- How to be present to their success.
- Listen to understand. Speak to engage. Question to facilitate their thinking.
- How to structure your coaching conversation.
- When and how to follow up on their results.
